

Brought to tears by moving sign at church

To the Editor,

We cannot remember the last time we felt as grateful and uplifted as when we saw the words: "No to hate pray for Pittsburg and us all" on a small sign in front of St Mary's in the Mountains Church.

The unpretentious but elegant New England structure looks to us now as a grand cathedral standing strong and proud. To us, the sign says that those inside believe in a God that is loving and caring for all. Neither of us are congregants nor are we even Christians, but that sign reduced both of us to tears of gratitude in this time, almost reminiscent of pre-World War II Europe.

You are the embodiment of what America should be. Thank you.
